	A cherry blossom serves as a gentle marker of the places where Japanese Canadian families lived, worked, and endured during the internment era.
	The Nikkei Internment Memorial Centre is represented by a torii gate, a traditional Japanese symbol of transition and remembrance.
	The Kohan Reflection Garden is represented by a koi fish, a traditional Japanese symbol of perseverance, harmony, and peace.
	This icon represents The Orchard in New Denver, a former apple orchard where rows of small shacks were built to house Japanese Canadian families during the internment.
	The shack icon represents the small homes built in the internment camps. Across the map, it stands as a reminder of the families who lived there and the resilience of their community.
